

WEEK ONE

GENESIS 13:5-18

Abram Makes Peace

SAY THIS

Prove you care more about others by letting go
of "what's fair."

WEEK ONE

GENESIS 13:5-18

Abram Makes Peace

SAY THIS

Prove you care more
about others by letting go
of "what's fair."

DO THIS

BED TIME

Read Genesis 13:5-18. Think about a situation that happened recently where you didn't think something was fair. Did you push to get what was "fair"? What would happen to your relationships if you did? Pray for each other and ask God to give you the grace and wisdom to know when to let go of what's fair in order to make peace.

REMEMBER THIS

"So let us do all we can do to live in peace.
And let us work hard to build up one another."
Romans 14:19, NIV

LIFE
APP

PEACE – Proving you care more about each other than winning an argument

DO THIS

BED TIME

Read Genesis 13:5-18. Think about a situation that happened recently where you didn't think something was fair. Did you push to get what was "fair"? What would happen to your relationships if you did? Pray for each other and ask God to give you the grace and wisdom to know when to let go of what's fair in order to make peace.

REMEMBER THIS

"So let us do all we can do to live in peace.
And let us work hard to build up one another."
Romans 14:19, NIV

LIFE
APP

PEACE – Proving you care more about each other
than winning an argument

THE ART OF DISCIPLINE: MAKING IT HELPFUL

by Gina McClain

Shepherding the hearts of our kids is one of those daily behaviors that does more to refine and challenge me than anything else in my life. In my interactions with my kids, God reveals more to me about my own humanity than I care to know, particularly in disciplinary situations. One thing I've learned about kids is that I cannot control their actions. There are times when I try. There are times I guide, nudge, remind, even harass . . . Yet in the end, they decide what action they will take. Not me. I don't know about you, but that really gets under my skin. So I have to actively pray for guidance and patience. Recently, I was reminded of these words in Ephesians 4:29:

"Don't say anything that would hurt another person. Instead, speak only what is good so that you can give help wherever it is needed. That way, what you say will help those who hear you." (GW)

It's a timely reminder for me that my role as mom is to fight for the heart of my kids, to create a culture of unconditional love in my home that fuels their emotional and moral health. Approaching discipline in a helpful way takes Practice, Planning, and Patience.

1. I need to PRACTICE the way that I talk to my kids. That means that through my everyday interactions I need to habitually speak words that are helpful to them. If I practice speaking them in positive interactions, I'm more likely to remember to speak them in a negative interaction.

2. Good discipline starts with good PLANNING. If my child makes the wrong decision, what are the consequences? Do they know what they are? There have been times we've sent a child to their room letting them know, "We're going to think about the right consequences for your action. In a little while, we will sit down with you and talk through them."

3. PATIENCE is critical when fighting for the heart of your child. Why? Because children are going to make mistakes. And my ability to be patient with their mistakes communicates unconditional love. They need a safe place to mess up and know that they are capable of doing better the next time.

In what way can you make your discipline more helpful than harmful this week as you fight for the heart of your child?

For more blog posts
and parenting resources, visit:
ParentCue.org

THE ART OF DISCIPLINE: MAKING IT HELPFUL

by Gina McClain

Shepherding the hearts of our kids is one of those daily behaviors that does more to refine and challenge me than anything else in my life. In my interactions with my kids, God reveals more to me about my own humanity than I care to know, particularly in disciplinary situations. One thing I've learned about kids is that I cannot control their actions. There are times when I try. There are times I guide, nudge, remind, even harass . . . Yet in the end, they decide what action they will take. Not me. I don't know about you, but that really gets under my skin. So I have to actively pray for guidance and patience. Recently, I was reminded of these words in Ephesians 4:29:

"Don't say anything that would hurt another person. Instead, speak only what is good so that you can give help wherever it is needed. That way, what you say will help those who hear you." (GW)

It's a timely reminder for me that my role as mom is to fight for the heart of my kids, to create a culture of unconditional love in my home that fuels their emotional and moral health. Approaching discipline in a helpful way takes Practice, Planning, and Patience.

1. I need to PRACTICE the way that I talk to my kids. That means that through my everyday interactions I need to habitually speak words that are helpful to them. If I practice speaking them in positive interactions, I'm more likely to remember to speak them in a negative interaction.

2. Good discipline starts with good PLANNING. If my child makes the wrong decision, what are the consequences? Do they know what they are? There have been times we've sent a child to their room letting them know, "We're going to think about the right consequences for your action. In a little while, we will sit down with you and talk through them."

3. PATIENCE is critical when fighting for the heart of your child. Why? Because children are going to make mistakes. And my ability to be patient with their mistakes communicates unconditional love. They need a safe place to mess up and know that they are capable of doing better the next time.

In what way can you make your discipline more helpful than harmful this week as you fight for the heart of your child?

For more blog posts
and parenting resources, visit:
ParentCue.org